A NEW NOVEL by REYNOLDS PUBLISHED THIS MORNING.
CATHERINE VOLMAR;

A FATHER'S VENGEANCE. BY G. W. M. REYNOLDS,
Anthor of "Life in London," "Omer Pasha," &c. Price 50 cts.
This stirring tale is the latest effort from Reynolds's pen. The dramatic power displayed throughout the story is equal to any of his previous offorts. It is a brilliant Romance of the present

Eastern War. It opens with the death of the Emperor Nicholas, takes us into the stirring actions of the Crimes, and then removes the scene to the Cancasian Mountains, and works un the story with the fortunes of Schamyl-affording opportunity for a series of vividly-told and picturesque adventures, which carry the reader on in a whirl of excitement to the last page. It is just the story for the times. It is immensely popular in Eu-gland and must meet with the same success in this country.

I E WIDOW BEDOTT;

SLIGHTLY ALTERED FROM O. W. HOLMES.
I heard of her before,
That she made each reader roar
With her fun;
That the look each page increased,
From the first until we ceased,
Having done.
They told me that the give

They told me that the grin From the moment I'd begin Would grow broader— And that suicker, screem and laugh With each added paragraph Would be louder!

Would be louder?
At last—I bought the book
And a leisure hour I took
To peruse it;
My mouth expanded then,
Insomuch that ne'er again
Can I use it!

From ear to ear it spread Circling half around my head,

"I know it is a sin"
For me to laugh and grin
At "the Deacon"—
At his "rheumatiz an' pain;"
But no mortal could refrain,
As I reckon.

Prove as precious in your eyes
As BEDOTT.

Says The N. Y. Observer, (second notice):

"We are not surprised at the great popularity of this book; it is so full of quaint but excellent humor, shooting the follies of common life, and hitting off evils which infest religious societies as well as the community, that verybody loves to read the Papers though much that is in them comes home to number one."

Says The N. Y. Independent:

"If one would enjoy laughter as a medicine, and have a feast of innocent mirth, let him not fail to read the Widow's sketches. Such droll humor in the way of hitting off the peculiarities of Yankeedom has not appeared since the days of Jack Downing. "The Donation Visit," The Sewing Society," 'Aunt Maguire's Experience,' and the life, will drive off dyspepsis and hypochondria for a month. The book is exceedingly clever; there is no trace of malice in it; nothing is overdone, but every this palpable."

HON. MISS MURRAY'S LETTERS
FROM THE UNITED STATES, CANADA AND CUBA.
One vol. 12mo., cloth, #1.

"Miss Murray and the Court of Prolland.—The story, first reported, we believe, by The New-York Evening Post, that Miss Murray, late Maid of Honor to the Queen, had been deprived of her position in cossequence of the opinious which she entertains and proposes to express in hor new book. "Travels in America, concerning the peculiar institution, is not altogether correct. Miss Murray is still in favor with the Queen, and resinned her position of her own free will. In a recent letter to a fillend she says that, knowing the sentiments she entertains respecting Slavery to be in opposition to those of the Court, and knowing also that persons high in authority connected with the Court had objected to the publication of these sentiments while bolding her official position, she felt it her duty to resign, sithing hy so doing she deprives herself of her inducence and position at Court, her official residence, and an income which can ill be spared. Still she does it cheerfully, rather than to forego the publication of her work. The Queen, however, still remains her firm friend."

"The Evening Post did not say that the Queen had deprived Miss Marray of her position as Maid of Honor: it said that the Queen sent her word that if she published a defense of Slavery she could not retain her position, and that in consequence of that intimation she had resigned that position. Such is the fact. Not does The Republican's version of the case contradict our.

REMARKABLE BOOK by a REMARKA—

BLE WOMAN.—The name of the Baroness de Marquerittes must be familiar to the greater portion of our readers. She is the daughter of Dr. Granville, one of the most distinguished physicians of Mayfair, Lundon. After receiving all the polish and accomplishments which the highest society and best obtactional institutions of Europe could impart to a nature of uncommon brilliancy and impressibility, she was married in early life to the Baron de Marquerittes, the last male representative of one of the oldest and neblest families of France. The young lovers spent the haleyon days of their matrinonial life in the midst of that whirl of sensenous pleasures which the say capitals of Europe aftord to those who have rank and momes. But misfortune, or at least the loss of fortune, overtook them in their brilliant career, and they flud to the New World, accompenied by their two young daughters and a governess with nothing but a few dismonds and their accomplishments to rely upon for their support. They brought letters to people of the first fashion in New York, and were received at the houses of the wealthy and prond, and were fetted and inwaed upon until it was discovered that they had to earn their bread. A change then took place. The Baroness could speak all the languages of Europe; she was brilliant in conversation, a superb occasion, a dashing writer, and accomplishmen mem—in short, she was a superior kind of Becky Sharpe. The various transformations she underwent in strugzling for a livelihood form one of the most remarkable histories that the records of woman's life can show. Nothing in the earner of woman from the days of Queen Semiramis down to those of George Sand can equal the strange and picturesque vicestudes of this brilliant down to make the records of woman's life can show. Nothing in the earner of woman from the days of weaving into it all the startling incidents of her assonance career.

This most attractive, instructive and piquant narrative, which contains some revelations of New-York life which are as astending as they are true, is now publishing in the columns of THE SUNDAY COURIER. It was commenced last week, but the call for the first part was so great that the publishers have been induced to reprint the commencement, and those who wish to obtain the whole of this strange romance of real life may do so by purchasing THE COURIER of next SUNDAY. Feb. 10. Those at a distance who desire to obtain this narrative, can have the paper sent to them by mail for six months, during which the work will be completed, by inclosing one dollar to the publishers.

The fair authorese is the daughter of the celebrated Dr. Dowling of Philaselphia, himself an anihor of no small celebrity. We have only space to make a few short extracts from the extended and highly compilmentary notices of the Press.

FROM THE REPUBLICAN, BALTIMORE, MD.

"This is a thrilling story, told in chaste and beautiful language, which can be read with groft as well as pleasure, if all our tales of fiction were of this character, they might be admitted to our firesides without fear of evu consequences. Kate Weston, if it shall not run through so many editions as Fanny Fern's stories, will leave a better impression when it is read. The heart will be softened and the evil passions undlifted by its perusal, and the reader will rise from its pages with more kindly feelings toward his fellow man."

FROM THE CHRISTIAN INTELLIGENCER, New-York.

"The book is worthy of commendation for its graceful and the evil and the evil graceful and the state of the character, well indeed discrimination of character.

FROM THE SUN, PHILADELPHIA. FROM THE SUN PHILADELPHIA.

"We commend this delightful book most cortially to the public as a great instrument of good, and many, very many of our citizens will read it the more eagorly from the fact that its pages are dedicated to the Rev. John Dowling, D.D., whose revers have been the dew, whose smiles the sunshine of each bud of intellect, each germ of high resolves, by a daughter's loving heart."

1 the believed that there is no other book in our language which presents so good a picture of Spain and the Spaniards are this does. The author possesses the necessary qualifications for the prediction of such a work. The Spaniards are a proud people—proud of their country and history—proud of their raintions and petry—proud of their raintions and petry—proud of their relation—and proud of their manners and habits. With such a nation the Attaché could feel a deep and sincere sympathy. He was not so materialistic as to be hausted by the ghoot of a ten-cent-fiece in the Plazee of the Escurial. He saw everything, from the private leves to the public bull flight; from the moonlight dance of Manolas to the regal balls of the Duchess d'Alva; from the needlework of the Syanish maiden to the glorious paintings of Titian, Velasquez, and Murille; and he has pet upon paper all that was worthy of record which came under his notice. But this is not all. He has given us a kind of political history of modern Spain, His book will make Syanish politics, and Spanish partisanchip, as familiar to the American reader as the conchology of his own 'Hards' and Softs.' The account given of M. Soule's diplomacy, of an increasing chapter in the work; and the description of the Revolution of 1848, and of the filling the structive, and interesting.

MRS. CAROLINE LEE HENTZ.—We have in press and will publish on the 20th of February one of the most brilliant and fascinating works which has ever been published in this country. It is from the airlied and elegant per of one of America's choicest writers—Mrs. CAROLINE LEE HENTZ—a lady who needs no flourish of trumpets to heraid her fame, for she has established a world-wide reputation years agone. We may say, however, that in this new work she has not only sustained her previous high reputation, but she has schieved a victory said reached a literary stand-point far in advance of any of her previous efforts. So say all who have examined the manuscript, and we doubt not that this will be the verdict of the critics when the book shall appear. The scenes are drawn in part from fashionable life in Boston and New-York.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE FIELD BOOK.

OFFICE OF THE O. & M. R. R. Co., Cincinnati, May, 1855.
Having examined Mr. Haslett's "Field Book for Radiroad Engineers," and made use of the rules he has laid down in many listances in field work on the division of which I have had charge, I am satisfied of its superiority to any similar work yet published in comprehensiveness and the ready application of the rules. The introduction of versed sines and external secants into the calculations very much reduces the time and labor required by the usual methods of calculations for locating lines.

secants into the calculations very much reduces the time and labor recurred by the usual methods of calculations for locating lines.

I recommend it to engineers as being a book combining accuracy and a ready application to field practice.

Engineer Eastern Division Ohio and Mississippi Railroad.

I most fully conour in recommending Mr. Haslett's work to the attention of Engineers, believing it better than anything of the kind yet published.

Chief Engineer, Indiana South-Western Railroad.

Chief Engineer, Indiana South-Western Railroad.

C. A. Haslett, Esq.—Dear Sir. I have examined with considerable care the work yet propose to publish for the use of Engineers in the field, and I have no hesitancy in saying that it will be the most useful of any work of its character yet offered to the public. Yours very truly, A. L., OSGOOD, Division Engineer, Ohio and Mississippi Railroad.

I concur with Mr. Cummings in the opinion that Mr. Haslett's mede of locating lines very much reduces the time and labor required by the weal method.
